Each spotlight showroom will display the range of blinds and curtains available, from blackout roller blinds to light filtering sheer curtains, but it pays to do your research in advance. To help, we've created an easy-to-understand overview of the various window coverings available in-store and online. What are vertical blinds? Vertical blinds are a popular choice for most types of windows and doors. They feature horizontal rather than vertical slats, and are typically used inside, including around the courtyard area. They look more formal than horizontal blinds, which also makes them suitable for office or formal lounge areas. They are easy to work, focus on child safety and provide superb light control. What are venice blinds? Venice blinds are the most popular blinds on the market today and it's easy to see why. Horizontal slats are connected to each other with either fabric or string and they can be easily adjusted to cover all or part of your window. Venice allow blinds to come to natural light and still provide privacy when they are open, with slats pushed onto the top one. It's for reasons that Venice is popular in the front rooms of blind Australian family homes. What are mini blinds? While mini blinds have developed their names over the years, they're actually just tiny Venetian blinds. They offer the same privacy as the Venice blind, and work exactly the same way. The main difference is the width of the slats. And they also come in small sizes, which makes them an ideal choice for small windows in places like bathrooms or toilets. Given those windows are often custom sizes, choosing a custom made mini blind can be a better choice for your home. A modern mini-blind tendency has been to use them in a purely decorative way, by covering more than three quarters of a window. While they look great, they obviously won't provide the privacy of covering a full window. What are Micro Blinds? Just when you thought things couldn't get any smaller than mini blinds, along came micro-blinds. Micro blinds are, as they sound, the smallest blind option available for sale today. The word 'micro' is not related to their width or size, but to the thickness of their slats. Micro blinds are perfect for any inside window and come in a large range of colors and finishes. Those who love a bit more detail in their home, including traditional and rustic finishes, will prefer what micro blinds can offer. What are panel blinds? For some people, blind is an option they think of twice. While modern blinds can be cordless and help you save energy around the house, cleaning them each week can be an extra chore. For those, the panel may have blind answers. Panel blinds, or panel glide blinds, large and traditional or can be stronger than vertical blinds. They are vertically installed and can move up and down a track or Panel blinds can be a suitable choice for larger windows and go really well with patio doors. What are pleated blinds? Pleated blinds can be perfect for your home if you prefer a slightly decorative accent on your blinds or curtains. Pleated blinds are an accordion-like pattern that can easily move up or down, and are made of flexible materials such as fabric or paper. As a result, they can be a bit more difficult to clean, but you will be rewarded if you are ready to put in the effort. They look great and can present something different in your favorite room. What are Roman blinds? Roman blinds, or Roman shades, are an attractive addition to any room of your home. They are usually made of fabric and solid, allowing you to manage your light without having to completely open or close them. Pulling up or letting down a string, they fold on or off themselves, looking good no matter how far the window they are open. As mentioned above, they can provide more light control, and as they are clothes, they give you both sheer and blackout options. That means you can completely blackout an entire window, or just part of one, or let go in the winter light when the days become shorter. Having clothes means that there are usually a lot of different colors to choose from, making them suitable for almost every room in the house. And Roman blinds can easily be combined with other window accessories or window coverings in the form of curtains, to make a style statement in any house. You might even be able to match the clothes for that magic touch. No matter what kind of blinds you prefer, Spotlight can help you find the right choice for your home at an affordable price.
